WHAT: Indo-American Corporate Excellence Awards WHERE: Trident, Nariman Point

The Indo-American Chamber of Commerce celebrated the American Independence Day with the 8th Indo-American Corporate Excellence Awards. The event was attended by the crème of Mumbai's business and political fraternities. Bollywood actor Salman Khan was an unusual attendee in a grey suit, minus a tie. Giving him company was actor Nargis Fakhri.

From giggling coyly to taking his support while stepping down from the stage, it seemed Nargis was doing everything possible to get Salman's attention. Bhai, though, seemed unfazed.

Why is Salman staying away from Hollywood?

He was voted the seventh-best-looking man in the world and the best looking man in India by US's People magazine in 2004 — but Salman Khan has maintained his distance from Hollywood, and says he has his reasons.

The Bollywood star unleashed his funny side when asked about the reason at an event organised by Indo-American Chamber Of Commerce (IACC).

"All my friends who have gone to America, they don't even want to come back for a holiday, wonder why. I am an actor, those guys were the 'sensible' ones, educated — engineers, doctors, scientists. These guys went there and made a lot of money, respect," he said.

"Me, I am giving Brad Pitt, Tom Cruise, all these guys a chance. Otherwise...poor guys," the 46-year-old said in a humorous way. Salman also targeted Hollywood films.

"Amazing movies, they make anything look good. Like for example the names I took, Brad Pitt, Tom Cruise. We just go on emotions and heart. We overdo anything, I mean guys like us also look really bad," said Salman.

He wrapped up the response with his arch-rival, superstar Shah Rukh Khan's famous dialogue from 'My Name Is Khan': "I mean my name is actually Khan and I actually am not a terrorist."

Caught in the act

Salman Khan and Nargis Fakhri were spotted together at a corporate awards event on Wednesday evening. Looks like Ranbir Kapoor doesn't seem to mind Sallu attending an event with his rumoured ex girlfriend. However going by Salman's looks in the picture, it seems, he finds other things more important than the lady! You Khan't have him!
